

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The invention is a method of encrypted communication, where instead of one communication channel between two communicating parties there are two channels; one channel is used to pass an one-time pad encrypted with the use of a private key, known to both parties, and the other channel is used to pass messages, encrypted with the help of this one-time pad; the one-time pad and messages are created and exchanged concurrently.